

What is it going to take to open the minds and hearts of these people who impose the smart meters on an unsuspecting public? I understand that the smart meters are saving the power companies huge sums of money, but because of the damage they create, where does the consideration of humanity's welfare come in? How are they protecting their own families...little children, relatives, friends, parents...from the effects from the radiation from smart meters? I am very much aware of the damage it has caused my own family by damaging my daughter- a very creative person, who was benefiting humanity by her profession as a psychotherapist. The installation of multiple smart meters as close as 10 feet away from her kitchen & bedroom wall has caused her to abandon her living quarters, due to the effects of smart meters, such as burning, head pain, chest pain, irregular heartbeats. In addition to this hard to accept behavior by the power company, a large amount of these meters were installed in the building where she conducted her psychotherapy practice. For the same reason mentioned earlier, she had to give up her successful practice in addition to her home.

If the almighty dollar continues to be the major objective of business, why can't these power companies inform and advise people how and where they can be helped. And not letting any more time pass before taking steps to preserve humanity. Where is any help coming from by our government to assist people by limiting radiation levels and making the advice widely available, for how to protect ourselves and how to get cured?
